

“Loving Wastefully” Jim Coakley, Feb 5th UU Service

As people of faith we are encouraged to love wastefully, but what does it mean to love wastefully? We explore this concept over two weeks. On Sunday, February 5th Jim Coakley, our student minister, will share his thoughts on what loving wastefully might look like and how we could incorporate it into our personal relationships. On Sunday, February 12th, he will focus on loving wastefully in society by discussing the play Normal Heart, currently being produced by the UWSP theater department. If you are able, please also join a small group attending the matinee production after the service. Please contact the SPUUF for more details.

Jim is beginning his third year as a part time seminarian at Meadville Lombard Theological School. He will be preaching twice a month and leading occasional Wednesday night activities as a part of his Student Ministry Rotation with SPUUF this year. He lives in Appleton with his spouse, two teenage children, and a dog. He is employed full time at Kimberly Clark as a Sales Planning Team Leader. If he does get any spare time, you'll probably find him on his bike - even in the winter!
